By comparing the second and third examples above, we see that the noun in example 3 has lost the い that would be present if the 漢字 were in its -ます verb form, かいます (買います). It is in a sense implied, based on the ひらがな ending after 上. Unfortunately, there are no hard and fast rules for this aspect of the language, and it can be frustrating when such words are encountered. Example 3 can be seen variously as 買い上げ、買上げ、or even 買上 in different dictionaries!

Nonetheless, not many 漢字 present with such difficulties, and once a primary word (usually the -ます form of the verb) has been learned, its related nouns will be easily recognized.

It is only when the preceding reading does not form a verb with its 漢字 that 付 will sometimes become voiced as づ: 気付く (キ づく: “to notice”) and 名付ける (な づける: “to name”) are examples of this, as 気 and 名 do not form standalone verbs with キ and な in the way 見 does with み.
