

The 80/20 JAPANESE Guide To Japanese Sentence Structure

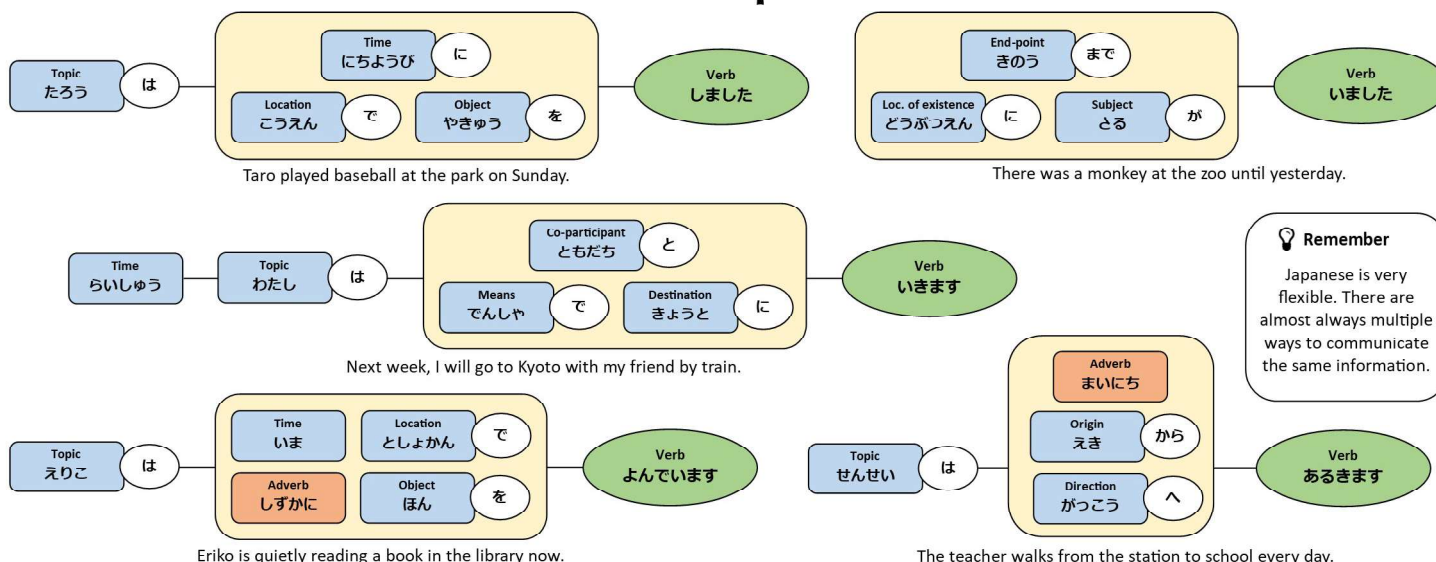

Confusing particle pairs

Adverbs

Topic は - Defines topic of a sentence - Emphasises info after は - Clarifies context for what follows	Subject が - Defines doer of the action - Emphasises info before が - Contains new or important info	Location で - Defines where action takes place - Used with verbs of action	Location of existence に - Defines where something is - Used with verbs of existence (あります・います)	Adverb Includes: Regular descriptive adverbs - はやく・たのしく - しずかに・きれいに* Time-related adverbs Frequency - まいにち・ときどき - にじかんごとに* Duration - いちじかん・にじゅうかん - いちねんじゅつ *Treat particle に as part of the adverb, as it would not be an adverb without it.
Time に - For points in time that occur repeatedly, eg. there are many Sundays, Januarys and 5 o'clocks Context tells us which one is being referred to	Time For time references that change depending on when 'now' is, eg. 'today', 'next week' and 'last year' are different depending on when they are said	Destination に Defines a place something is moving to	Direction へ Defines the direction something is moving in

A destination can also be a direction (eg. you can move in the direction of a place, such as 'home'), but a direction is not always a destination (eg. 'north' is not a place you can go to).

Remember

Japanese is very flexible. There are almost always multiple ways to communicate the same information.
