+ Words and Compounds

Kanji	English	Pronunciation
入る (intr.)	to enter	はいる (hairu)
入る (intr.)	to enter	いる (iru)
入れる (tr.)	to put (something) into	いれる (ireru)
入口	enter + mouth = entrance	いりぐち (iriguchi)
入国	enter + country = to enter a country	ニユウ・コク (NYŪ-KOKU)
入金	enter + gold = payment	ニユウ・キン (NYŪ-KIN)
買い入れる	buy + enter = to stock up on	かい いれる (kai ireru)

はいる expresses the intransitive meaning of the verb “enter” (that is, to enter some type of place). It is rarely used in compounds.

いる is most commonly found in compounds, primarily when the other kanji is read with kun-yomi (ニユウ performs this function when the other kanji is read with 音読み).

いれる is simply the transitive companion of はいる.

As can be seen in the fourth example, this kanji can behave on rare occasions like 買.
